6. Complete the attached form on Credentialing and Examination Outcomes. Use the most current information for each class of candidates. If your college or board has a specialty or subspecialty, a separate form must be completed for each.

Job (task) analysis, test validation, and criteria referencing (for establishing cut scores) improve the fairness, accuracy, and legal defensiveness of the credentialing examination, and certification of specialists. The following questions (7-11) address these functions.

7. a) Has your RVSO conducted a job analysis to help substantiate entry-level requirements and examination? No
b) If so, please indicate year undertaken? Not applicable
c) If not, is such an analysis planned? No, none is planned at this time.

8. a) How does your RVSO develop examination items?

The Examinations Committee (Chair and nine members; three members from each subspecialty) sets the examination from a question bank and then reviews the examination before it is administered. New questions for the bank are solicited from the membership and are required from new Diplomates. All questions submitted and those in the bank are annually reviewed by the Examinations Committee.

- b) Is a professional examination consultant used? If so, to what extent?

No, none is used at this time.

9. How is your examination validated?

The Examinations Committee members serve three-year terms and may not serve longer than two consecutive terms. Three members serve in each specialty area and three to five others are co-opted as needed for question-writing workshops. These provisions assure accumulation of test questions and participation in the examination process by a broad spectrum of the membership. All items are reviewed for appropriateness and accuracy by the committee members. Each question is also evaluated independently by each committee member for the level of knowledge required to answer it. For this purpose the questions are rated in three categories: a. less than entry-level knowledge; b. at entry-level knowledge; and c. more specialized than entry level for board certification. Questions at the two ends of the spectrum are removed from the bank. Any outdated items are deleted. Following completion of the examination, the newly elected Diplomates are invited to critique the procedure. A statistical item analysis is done on the results of the general veterinary microbiology (Part I) and subspecialty (Part II) examinations and questions that do not perform as expected (i.e. have poor difficulty or discrimination indices) are identified. The committee pays special attention to a question's ability to discriminate in both examinations. These, plus any inappropriate items identified after review are deleted from the question data bank.

10. How do you set the pass point?

Based on previous experience from almost forty (40) years of administering the examinations, the pass mark has been set by the Board of Governors; it is 60% for the general veterinary microbiology (Part I) examination and 75% for the subspecialty (Part II) examination for each subspecialty.

11. a) Have your testing methods been previously established and reported to the ABVS? Yes
 b) If not, please describe them as part of this report (e.g., 300 multiple-choice questions).
 Are candidates notified of the passing point or the method of setting the passing point before the examination?

The examination for certification as a Diplomate of the American College of Veterinary Microbiologists consists of two parts. A general veterinary microbiology (Part I) written examination and a subspecialty (Part II) written examination. The general veterinary microbiology (Part I) examination is designed to test the knowledge of the examinee in the broad field of veterinary microbiology. The 240 multiple choice questions must be completed in four (4) hours and are prepared from information contained in current published literature and in textbooks. The general veterinary microbiology (Part I) examination is on: bacteriology (30%); virology (30%); immunology (30%); mycology (5%) and molecular biology/technology (5%). This is the examination “blueprint.” The examinee is expected to be knowledgeable about zoonotic diseases and the pathogenesis of infectious diseases of animals. The pass mark for the general veterinary microbiology (Part I) examination is 60%.

There are three subspecialties in the subspecialty (Part II) examination: bacteriology/mycology; immunology; and virology. Each subspecialty (Part II) examination consists of 100 questions and each question is based on a series of projected slides. A maximum of three slides per question is used. Adequate time is given for all candidates to complete each question before moving on to the next question. The examinee is required to recognize, interpret, and/or analyze the material presented. The subject matter includes various facets of veterinary microbiology. The pass mark for each subspecialty (Part II) examination is 75%.

Candidates are notified prior to taking the examinations that the pass mark for the general veterinary microbiology (Part I) examination is 60% and the pass mark for each subspecialty (Part II) examination is 75%.

12. Number of active diplomates primarily associated with:

a) Academia	106
b) Industry	17
c) Government	28
d) Practice	9
e) Other (please specify) Diagnostic	47

18. Describe notable events of the past year.

During the past year, five certificates and cash awards were awarded to five graduate students entered in the ACVM-sponsored competitions at the Conference of Research Workers in Animal Diseases (CRWAD) annual meeting. The ACVM sponsored one symposium during the past year. At the 2004 CRWAD annual meeting, the jointly sponsored AAVI-ACVM symposium in Chicago, Illinois was entitled "Advances in Vaccine Delivery Technologies." At the 2005 CRWAD annual meeting, the jointly sponsored AAVI-ACVM symposium in St. Louis, Missouri will be entitled "Use of Genomics for Disease and Vaccine Research." We had an all time record of 18 applicants for certification and 17 of these candidates were approved to sit for the ACVM examinations in 2005. We initiated efforts to develop an ACVM Biosecurity Task Force. The objective of the task force is to assist local, state, and federal officials in prevention of, response to, and recovery from infectious diseases, which threaten food security or public health. Also, we initiated efforts to develop a new award during 2005. We will recognize an Outstanding Veterinary Microbiologist each year with an award and sponsor a session at a meeting for the individual selected to give a presentation about their research achievements.

19. What perceived or anticipated problems will your RVSO face regarding veterinary specialization now or in the future?

The College is considering ways to revitalize members and make the organization more valuable. Due to projected shortages of microbiologists we need to ensure quality candidates are recruited and mentored to meet the needs of the future.

20. Were any deficiencies identified by the ABVS in your RVSO's last 5-year report or last annual report? None were identified.
a) If so, what were those deficiencies? Not applicable
